

Finding God    Part 5

There are so many ways in which people find God.

The Bible shows how dramatic it can be for some people, such as the apostle Paul. See Acts chapter 9.

The consequences of Paul's conversion are of course phenomenal. He has been used so powerfully through His writing alone – such a huge part of the New Testament – which has mightily impacted and guided the Christian Church ever since.

In my own case, I discovered God quietly in my childhood. My conversion was just as real as Paul's, but of course nowhere near as dramatic.

It has nevertheless been my privilege to prove the reality of the Creator's love in my life through infancy into adolescence, then in young adulthood, and now in senior years.

We can only marvel at the unnumbered ways in which people make this discovery.

Sometimes an entire group responds when challenged about their great need. This happened on the day of Pentecost when 3000 Jews “were cut to the heart” after they were faced up to their rejection of God. They repented on the spot! Acts 2.36-37.

How wonderful that, one way or another, our Creator continues to draw people to Himself. Has He drawn you?
